Newcomers and Chamber Members:

Dear Chamber Members:

Your Chamber enthusiastically encourages Rowan Chamber members to "Buy Local." To make it a bit simpler, we present you with the Chamber's 2023 Membership Directory and Talent Attraction Guide.

The 2023 Directory is a cross-referenced listing of the Chamber's 800 member companies, organized into three main sections:

- Talent Attraction Guide
- Alphabetical list of members
- Business Category list of members

The Talent Attraction Guide welcomes newcomers and businesses to our community. We thank all of our advertisers in this publication for supporting our efforts to promote our local business community.

As you may already know, the Chamber has contracted with the Salisbury Post for the production of our Directory. We are grateful to each of you who have worked with them over the last several months to ensure the timely production and distribution of this publication.

By partnering with other Chamber members, you can rest assured that you are doing business with companies that care about investing in the future of our entire region.

I am confident you will realize significant value from the return on your membership investment in the upcoming year.

Please contact the Chamber for any additional information, (704) 633-4221 or info@rowanchamber.com or www.rowanchamber.com

We appreciate your membership!

Sincerely,

Elaine P. Holden

Chamber of Commerce

Be an original.

Elaine P. Holden

Elaine Holden, 2023 Chairwoman of the Rowan Chamber of Commerce, has always had a passion for education and for service to her community. She has been a Vice-President for Admissions, a development officer at Catawba College, a public school substitute teacher for Rowan Salsibury schools, and along the way, was a 1995 graduate of Leadership Rowan. She has consistently volunteered in Salisbury and Rowan on a number of boards.

In 2019, she made a leap to outreach and program development with the NC Transportation Museum Foundation, and during that transition, she was invited to serve on the Board of Directors for the Chamber. She has served on a variety of committees and has loved the opportunity to reach out to the entire county, in a collaborative spirit.

"One thing I have marveled at is other than four staff members, everyone else in the Chamber is a volunteer," Holden said. "People willingly donate a lot of time and talent, and that is a great part of why the Chamber is successful."

A message from the Rowan County Board of Commissioners

The Rowan County Board of Commissioners is committed to serving and representing Rowan County through responsive and effective leadership. We are honored to serve our residents and guests and are working hard to provide a wonderful quality of life for all who live, work and play in our community.

We believe in working together to promote a cooperative, unified spirit as we address the key issues that impact our families, our businesses and our quality of life. Providing competitive opportunities for industry is accomplished through the ready availability of land, buildings, infrastructure and a modern, highly-trained workforce.

Whether you are looking for a place to raise a family, locate a business or enjoy your hard-earned retirement, opportunity abounds here. By working together we can show others how great it is to call Rowan County home.

"Our boomerangs moved out of town for that first big job, but now have had their families, and would like to have grandparents help. They're looking for quality of life and a lower cost of living," Spalding notes.

As far as specific skill sets, Spalding explains, "Since Covid, with the labor shortage and the supply-chain issues, people who can get products from point A to point Z are extremely valuable."

Another group in this subset is veterans who are exiting the military, a process that takes about 18 months.

"We want them to know there are jobs here in Rowan County, and we want them to take advantage of the services at the V.A. Medical Center," Spalding says. ♦

Long Term Businesses

In just three years, the Rowan County Chamber of Commerce will celebrate its 100th anniversary.

"We're already planning a big celebration," says Elaine Spalding, chamber president.

That will take place at the annual meeting, held each January. But without successful businesses in the community, there would be no chamber.

"All of our funding comes from the business community," Spalding explains. "The success of the chamber has been tied with the success of the local business community."

That was true even during the challenging times of the pandemic.

"We helped businesses pivot during Covid," she says. "We provided businesses with a Business Recovery Kit: masks, hand sanitizers, and social-distancing floor stickers. We had Webinars about PPP loans.

"Some chambers closed their doors, but I was here every single day. We worked our butts off to make sure our local businesses survived the pandemic. We were here for our business community. It was a wonderful team effort."

Spalding said that the businesses that did close "were close to the end of their business life. The owners were ready to retire."

On the other hand, Spalding says, the number of family-owned businesses in the community tell the story of longevity.

"They've been here through the Depression and wars and the latest pandemic."

For example, Cheerwine and Summersett Funeral Home are fifth-generation family businesses, an extremely rare accomplishment in the business world.

Congratulations to all of the local businesses who are older than 50 years or 100 years old. They are listed to the right. ◆

Yadkin River Park

Rowan County, like Davidson County, sits along the banks of one of North Carolina's most appealing destinations for family recreation and history: the Yadkin River.

Davidson County has already developed their part of the Yadkin River Park, with walking and hiking trails, canoe and kayak launches, a dog park and picnic tables to name a few amenities.

Now it's Rowan County's turn, and work is already well underway to create a beautiful seating area with benches, parking, lighting, and connections to the first phase to what the town of Spencer and the county are hoping will become a sought-afdestination.

The whole idea for a park began when the historic landmark, the Wil-Cox Bridge, a 1,300-foot concrete arch being built in 1924, was initially slated for demolition as part of the construction of the 185 bridge replacement project about 10 years ago. Instead of letting it be destroyed, Davidson County accepted the bridge as a recreational and historic amenity, walking and hiking trails, all just making it a pedestrian bridge, and the idea for building a park around the bridge was born.

The park is also situated adter recreational and historic jacent to Fort York, the location of one of the final battles of the Civil War and the Yadkin River is the longest river in North Carolina, with 215 miles that connects to the Pee Dee River, creating the Yadkin Pee-Dee River Basin.

> Ronnie Smith, founder of Friends of Rowan County, has been incredibly instrumental in getting the Rowan County side of the park, located in Spencer, up and running.

> "This is not going to be a rest area on I-85," explained Smith.

"The preparation for the game of the life does not include the practice of underage drinking"

~ Terry Osborne

"The dream is to make it one of the premier parks in the state." An artistic rendering by the design firm Benesch shows the trailhead-to-be in colorful detail.

The park, on both sides, include connections to the Piedmont Legacy Trail and the Mountain to Sea Trail.

There is currently a debate ongoing about when to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the bridge — on its inception or its completion. Right now, the majority seems to be leaning toward a 2024 date.

Spencer held the groundbreaking of their side of the park in October, 2022, and the goal is to have the initial part of construction by Hall Contracting completed by early spring. The Davidson County side of the park is an ongoing project that first opened to the public in 2019. It is now drawing more than 600 visitors per day.

Spencer's Mayor Jonathan Williams has said that project, combined with doubling the size of Stanback Educational Forest, opens up the opportunity to connect to Salisbury and create 12.5 miles of continuous greenway in Rowan County, which doesn't count development on the Davidson side.

"Just think about the amazing recreational amenity that that's going to provide not only for Rowan and Davidson County citizens, but for folks across North Carolina and beyond," Williams said.

Williams said partnership and collaboration with people in Davidson County is essential to making the entire stretch an enviable destination.

"We're looking to connect Yadkin River Park with the Yadkin River Trailhead on the Spencer side," Williams said, adding one of the first things he did when he was elected was to get involved with the project via Spencer projects planner Joe Morris.

Williams said the town's goal is to complement the Davidson park, not duplicate

"I have a lot of childhood memories here," said Smith. "I hope that future generations will come here, like I did, to fish, go boating or hiking, be out in nature with their family. This is the kind of thing we need to pass down to future generations."◆

Macy's Fulfillment Center on track

for 2024 completion

After breaking ground in April 2022, the contracting company has begun the foundation construction for the new, 1.4 million square foot industrial space for a new Macy's fulfillment center.

Macy's will eventually invest more than $584 million in the "automated, direct to consumer" fulfillment center in China Grove.

The center will be located at the intersection of I-85 and U.S. 152 on Exit 68. It will serve as Macy's main shipping location for customers in the central southeastern United States, but will ship orders directly to customers nationwide, accounting for nearly 30 percent of the retailer's digital supply chain capacity once fully operational.

The project expects to be completed by December 2024 but with new technology and even bigger amounts of jobs to prepare for, the two-year process to meet the deadline began in October with the Southeast Silverman Group construction efforts.

Scott Shelton, vice president of the Rowan County Economic Development Council, shared that the Silverman Group has had smooth progress at the 85 North Logistics Center, covering 198 acres of land. Half of the building has been filled with a foundational, concrete slab to be used as flooring in the facility. At the same time, the outside concrete slabs are being installed to assure efficiency in the process.

With the completion of flooring in half of the building, the walls of the fulfillment center are erected, where slabs are complete, and the interior of the structure is beginning to take shape. Toby Nelson, who is working with the leasing side of the development, called these "perimeter walls" for the building. As those walls go in, visitors will be able to get a clearer idea of what the facility will look like in 2024.

"The tenant, the Macy's team and the construction team are working as a team in this massive project to push along the construction and the process," said Nelson.

The business, when completed, expects to add 2,800 jobs in Rowan County.

Once the exterior and building foundation are in place, the inner workings of the distribution center can begin to be assembled, creating one of Rowan County's largest economic job investments. •

Cherry Treesort adds new Lodging

intern@salisburypost.com

Local lodging is more than a vacation spot for a weekend outing or holiday. For a China Grove stay, Cherry Treesort's 26 acres offers a unique assortment of treehouses and hobbit homes for a cozy place to relax for whatever need a clientele could need.

Cherry Treesort is one of the 11 lodging options and is a member of the Rowan County Chamber of Commerce. The newest attraction to the lodge came in July with the construction of "Trevor's Layaway", a treehouse that provides optimal shade that was just in time for the summer season for $212 a night. The 400 square foot home can house up to eight gusts with outdoor swings and a fire pit for an all-round experience of the forest sight on the farm including a view for sunrises and sunsets.

"We open one to two a year," said owner of the property, Trent Cherry. "We have ten now since we opened in 2015."

"Trevor's Layaway" was named after Cherry's brother, a tradition of the resort for each of its homes. Every one is named after a family member of Cherry's, including Mimi and Papa's hobbit house and Miss Molly, a treehouse named after his daughter. The hobbit homes reflect an overnight stay for those fans of the popular fantasy series, Lord of the Rings, but the comforting anterior and large circular doors offer a different stay for anyone coming through Rowan County or local to the area.

When it comes to the lodging industry, the option to expand comes down to the demand in the local market and the up on booking.

"You never want to overbuild," shared Cherry. "We're kind of at that spot now where we had a goal. I don't know if we're going to add one next year or not yet, we usually plan about four to six months out and usually build in the summer."

A driving force for the resort business is a collaboration with local stops in the area that is rich for out-of-town visitors for both vocational and job prospective purposes.

Cherry said guests can expect to find a directory in each of the homes that list local shops, eateries, attractions, wineries and other special places to stop during their stay in the Grove stretching from Lexington to Concord. The Rowan Economic Development Commission describes Rowan County as a place that "provides a better balance for business and life that is a draw to new residents and businesses."

"We kind of keep an eye on where we're at. We got two hobbit houses to give something a little different than treehouses. We just put in a 70 by 30 jump pillow which the guests really like."

The unique amenities in addition to the typical you would see at lodges make Cherry Treesort stand out in the South of the County. In October, the resort hosted the Great Pumpkin Wall on the property of the farm that included full participation of the community. The outdoor shelves were stacked with hundreds of pumpkins carved by South Rowan schools and scout troops in addition to sports teams, farms and churches. The heavy involvement with the locals caters to potential for an even stronger workforce to continue growing the commerce of Rowan County.

Other means Cherry Treesort has taken to cultivate the economy in the area included participating in Winterfest 2022, offering a tour of the homes on the farm in addition to hosting the Young Entrepreneur Fest for 40 youths of the County to share their goods as a business endeavor opportunity at no cost.. •

How to Buy a Home

One of the very best things about choosing a home in Rowan County is the sheer variety of choices: in architecture, neighborhood settings, and price points - there is something for everyone. From the heart of vibrant downtown living in loft apartments or condominiums, to single family homes around the countryside, Rowan County has got it! Choose from a stately vintage home in one of the 10-historic districts in the Salisbury, a small city with a thriving arts scene, a variety of restaurants and unique shopping, and two microbreweries. . . or opt for a bungalow in one of our walkable neighborhoods in any one of the charming small towns that emanate from the county seat, or find a small farmette with acrehave it all! Is waterfront living your dream? YES, we have it! Is a golf course community on your radar? Rowan County features and private courses!

Rowan County IS the center of the Universe! With metro areas such as Charlotte, Greensboro, and Winston-Salem just an hour's drive away, you're never far from big city culture and vibrancy ~ yet you get to enjoy the laid-back atmosphere (and less traffic!) that Rowan offers. AND. .. our housing price points (and taxes!) are notably less for the same house - quality, character, and construction - that you'll find in these larger cities.

As we welcome you to Rowage 'out in the county'. Yes, we an County, North Carolina, the best advice we can offer is to encourage you to work with a locally based agent: one that lives, works, and participates in the some of the area's best public community they serve. Your local agent will be able to give you the very best knowledge of the area and its lifestyle and housing options. There are several locally based real estate agencies that are members of the Rowan County Chamber of Commerce with decades of local experience. You'll appreciate working with professionals who know and love Rowan County.

Spencer focused on Entrepreneurs

By Madeline Wagoner intern@salisburypost.com

The town of Spencer has taken the business bull by the horns, aiming to create an entrepreneurial development program that will help reduce empty storefronts and encourage new businesses to join the community.

Small town downtowns across the country have been reinventing themselves as the mall infatuation of the 1980s and 1990s has passed, but it is a process, and many communities, like Spencer, are looking at ways to draw small business owners into the community. The idea for a business incubator program and facility began to grow.

"Budding entrepreneurs did not have the tools and skillset to be able to successfully run a long-standing and successful business" said Spencer Mayor Jonathan Williams, who saw a frequency of businesses coming and going in Spencer through the last year. "From the town perspective, we needed to make partners and collaborations within our community and Rowan County to try and bring the skill sets, training and space so that budding entrepreneurs and resources to help them build their business so that they can be successful long-term."

Spencer first took the step to craft a business incubator concept with its new town hall that moved into the plaza building on Salisbury Avenue. The space has been renovated to become the new home for the town administration and the Spencer Police Department which is surrounded by small businesses.

"We had, as a town, committed to investing, and we bought half of the building and local owners Beth and Rob Nance purchased the other half along with Dr. Washington (who has since opened a dental practice in the facility)," Williams explained.

or to take on the North Carolina territory to begin seeking the potential within his local community. He is now working with Flywheel to create a program that will encourage growth for start-up businesses in Rowan County.

"In order to have a vibrant downtown with thriving businesses, we have to grow our own, and so that's where this initiative comes from," the may- has been such an integral part

Co-working space, which the business incubator concept is based on, has a recommended space of 20,000 square feet to nation of her daughters' names, Beth and Amy. Her hope is to preserve the statement of faith in Rowan County and to utilize the church to benefit everyone in the community.

Nance and Lane will partner in offering the business incubator project. Both women are also part of the Spencer Women's Club.

"That First Baptist Church in our community for over 100 years," Nance shared. "It's very important to the two of us that it maintains its place in the community."

Large office space and potential event space top the list for planning in order to grow companies in the economy. Williams said one particular need is daycare for new entrepreneurs who need someone to watch their children while they try to launch businesses.

A culinary program for those interesting in cooking would act similar to a commissary kitchen but with some additional features particularly targeting new chefs. Along with the typical preparatory space, the proposed space would also include a bar and dining area so that chefs could learn what it would be like to operate in a fully-functioning restaurant.

"They would collectively train to learn not only the culinary piece of it, but more importantly, how to successfully run a food and beverage business," Williams said.

The restaurant business is traditionally one of the most challenging, and survival rates are traditionally low in the area, so the hope is a culinary training program would include business operation classes to help with longevity.

Williams said the goal is to make restaurants established

In December 2021, the Nances began making improvements to the building to reopen spaces along the plaza to new businesses. Working with Elaine Spalding, president of the Rowan County Chamber of Commerce, to fill the individual spaces, it soon became clear the need for business space in the town was greater than the space available.

Williams himself decided to around the county have a place end a 16-year career as a water resources engineer to take an entrepreneurial turn in May 2022. The Southcentral U.S. company Garver hired the may-

Museum of Dolls, Toys and Miniatures for ten years, and her mother, Susan Lane, decided to purchase the Spencer First Baptist Church. This space has an approximate square footage of 50,000.

of Spencer has chosen to invest in growing their own," said Spalding of the Rowan County Chamber. "Mayor Williams, Town Manager Peter Franzese and the whole leadership group in the town of Spencer really gets it, they understand how important it is to nurture folks in your community that would like to start their own business." busine knowing how in folio and the wowing aplar in the town of Spencer really gets it, they understand how important it is to nurture folks in training als. ◆

With attractions such as the N.C. Transportation Museum, the goal is to encourage local businesses to settle in Spencer, knowing they have the support of local administrative officials and the Rowan County chamber. According to Williams, 2023 will be dedicated to establishing a plan for the Entrepreneurial Development Initiative and renovating the space dedicated to training developing professionals. •

Voted No. 1 Real Estate Company and Top Realtor! Over the years, Salisbury has grown into an area that some people can't even recognize anymore. The economic development that has occurred in Salisbury and all of Rowan County has give the community opportunities it never had 20 years ago. There have been multiple construction and business projects that has given citizens chances that have helped them become more financially stable.

Rod Crider, President and CEO of the Rowan Economic Development Council, came to Rowan County in 2017 to help make progress towards its expansion.

"Our guiding principles are to reduce poverty, increase prosperity, and improve the overall quality of life and we do that primarily through targeted economic growth and that would be attracting new investment to our area and helping existing businesses that are here to grow and expand and create jobs and add to the tax base for the overall economic benefit of the community," Crider said.

The process to attract these companies to Rowan County involves many facets that are both impersonal and personal.

"For new businesses we're marketing the community. Making sure people are aware of Rowan County, all that it has to offer, it's competitive advantages. We do that through traditional marketing means, advertising, visiting with companies, visiting with site selection consultants who work with those companies when they're looking to expand or relocate," Crider said.

Crider says the main industries the county targets are advanced manufacturing, logistics and distribution, medical, and information technology due to its location and existing ecosystem. Some of the companies that have relocated to Rowan County are Eastern Fence, Fab-Con, Chewy, and Macy's.

"The benefits of bringing these new businesses in to town are essentially you create new jobs for residents in the area and you increase the tax base, spreading the burden of the tax base across a larger pie. With that growth comes growth in commercial businesses, retail businesses, service businesses and then you'll start to see new residential developments will come as a result of that, too," Crider said.

Maia Smith is a real estate agent who works in Salisbury and Rowan County. She believes with increased prices to construction materials and the labor shortages, the demand for housing is not meeting what is actually being built. But she also thinks Salisbury is moving in the right direction to keep up with the market.

"I know in Salisbury, there are three small subdivisions going and that's very good, we do need more. So for the economic development of Salisbury I know there's a big push to bring new talent in the workforce, but with new talent in the workforce coming they need a place to live," Smith said.

Smith says that Salisbury is in a special situation that could help with this problem.

"Tiny home communities are the future of real estate because people getting into a home after Corona, they don't want a huge house and being obligated with all the taxes. The new generation, they would love to own tiny homes. Zoning for tiny homes is extremely hard. We have so much country, rural land, Rowan County can be a pioneer and come up with a tiny home project and have big land for the developer zoned as a tiny home community. People will love it," Smith said.

Once these businesses relocate and settle into the county, it's up to the Rowan County Chamber of Commerce to help bolster and maintain the relationships with these business"The Chamber's role is with our existing business community, maintaining a healthy business climate, we're very involved in business advocacy at the local, state, and federal level," Elaine Spalding, President of the Rowan County Chamber of Commerce, said.

"The Chamber and our business leaders prioritize the major community development projects. Our focus for 2023 is on the Airport and a new I-85 exit for East Spencer and High Rock Lake," Spalding said.

The economic development plan goes beyond developing healthy relationships with businesses. It's about making sure the community and the citizens themselves are up to the task to fill these roles once they become available.

"When we survey our chamber members the most important thing to them is helping to improve the education system. So they want to do everything that they can to help our K-12 schools, our higher ed, they're very focused on the next wave of the workers that are going to hit their businesses," Spalding said.

Even with all of the economic progress that has benefited Rowan County, it still could improve. Back in the 70s, the county at its peak had 71,000 employed citizens, that figure is at 65,000 now, according to Rod Crider.

With all the headway Rowan County has done and will continue to do so with its economic development plans, it could reach that number sooner rather than later.

Talent Attraction Plan

Launched

By Brad Dountz brad.dountz@salisburypost.com

Rowan County has much to offer to those who come here for work or a nice vacation. The county has gone out of its way to make sure people are aware of all the positive things in the community. It also succeeds in getting employees to come to Rowan County for work by collaborating with businesses here to see how the worker population can continue to grow.

"We're working really hard on this talent attraction program with the Rowan Economic Development Council and linking up all the employers with the available jobs they have, so somebody can really see all the amenities of the community, but then actually see 'OK, whose got jobs available?' and if they have that skillset and can kind of plug in there," Elaine Spalding, President of the Rowan County Chamber of Commerce, said.

Spalding says the Chamber and the Rowan EDC broadly targets young professionals under 40 and "boomerangs" or people who used to live in the area and have now returned. The more specific demographics they

Most importantly, the county is working directly with businesses to see what can be done to keep employees working for them. They recently hosted a Disney institute program where the best practices from several Fortune 500 companies were shared with employers, HR professionals, and business owners "to retain your best and brightest employees and then how to attract the right fit people for your company," according to Spalding.

Spalding believes business owners need to adapt better with the times when hiring employees.

"Maybe changing some of their policies if they're really going to attract young professionals. You can't say no tattoos, no piercings. You need to be accepting of a very diverse population and you need to change maybe some of your corporate culture to be more accepting of very diverse population," Spalding said. "Everybody's having to change and I know a lot of times people don't like change in particular. We've got a lot of businesses that I have been around for 100 years."

Rod Crider, President and CEO of the Rowan Economic Development Council, thinks that COVID made people think over what they wanted to do for living and Rowan County has made sure to adapt to these employment changes.

"We saw a record number of people of new businesses being formed during that time. I think that communities are going to have to stay focused on that and assisting people who want to start their own business who want to be entrepreneurs and providing structure and resources and assets for them to use to assist them in their ability to run a successful business," Crider said. ◆

When you think of Salisbury, do you think of all of the art that comes out of it? If not, that's ok, but that may change soon. Salisbury has always been proactive in nurturing artists and the work that they create. Having this cultural identity has made Salisbury an unlikely hub for people to come to hone their passion and give the community a spirit that is truly unique.

"I can't move to another community, unless it has a very strong art scene," Elaine Spalding, President of the Rowan County Chamber of Commerce, said when interviewing for her current position. With her husband being an artist, Spalding knew that an active art scene would be beneficial for both of them when moving to a new place.

Spalding's husband, Keyth Kahrs, eventually found a home at the Rail Walk Studios & Gallery, which is a "late 1800s warehouse which has been converted to artists' studios and a cooperative gallery."

"It's just wonderful to have that co-op for the artists and I think we find that in a lot of spaces here because this community has supported the arts for so long," Spalding said

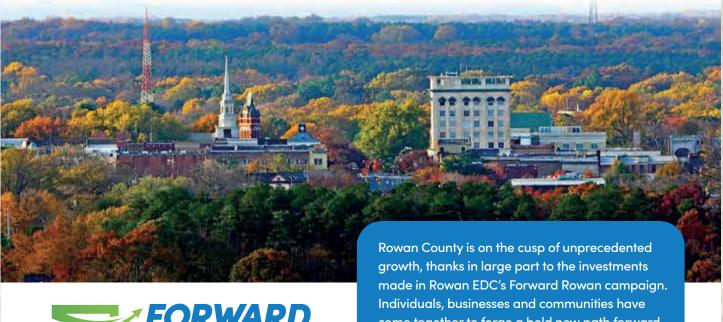

One of the other hallmarks of Salisbury's contribution to the arts is the Waterworks Visual Arts Center. Around since 1959, Waterworks has been a place where people can share their art and for others to learn more about making it themselves. The center offers galleries, sensory gardens, a library, and studios for people who want a tangible artistic experience.

"We're so fortunate here to have all that we have and it was because of the visionaries back in the late 50s and early 60s who wanted the same cultural experiences as they had in the big cities right here in their own community," Anne Scott Clement, Executive Director of Waterworks, said.

The center also offers classes for peocome together to forge a bold new path forward.

It's a path that builds upon recent successes and positive momentum. It imagines an economy that offers opportunity and an improved lifestyle for all. It promises better jobs, more capital investment, and a more resilient economy that can sustain us through economic challenges.

We're working side-by-side and with others, to build a better community in which we live and work. Together, we are moving Rowan forward.

ple as young as 18 months old. People can learn pottery or even learn to develop black and white photos.

Patricia Steele Raible, a Charlotte-based artist, currently has some her art on display at Waterworks. She believes that the size of Salisbury gives it an advantage over Charlotte when trying to foster the arts.

"I think even Charlotte struggles with most of its art centers and museums and the downtown area to actually be able to reach the entire community because their communities on the west and the east side, they have transportation difficulties. So the nice thing about Salisbury and Waterworks is that, while it is downtown, it's close enough to everyone so that it can provide those opportunities for the young people," Raible said.

Besides just artwork, Salisbury has gone out of its way to cater to other forms of expression. Lee Street Theatre has been supporting "the development and presentation of original, challenging, and entertaining performance art" for nearly 15 years like the recent stage performance of "Dracula." The Salisbury Symphony Orchestra has been around for 52 years, employing countless classically trained musicians to perform a wide-ranging amount of music for Salisbury.

"We have not only an accredited art museum, but we have four performing arts theaters, we have a symphony here, 10 historic districts, a history museum, a history room at the library," Scott said. "Arts and culture has been so important to our community for many, many, many years."

When it comes to continuing the grand tradition of supporting the arts around Salisbury, it may be up to the people growing up here now to help make sure it carries on.

"Sustainability is always a big question for everybody. How are we going to sustain all of these wonderful entities that we have? And we're hoping that we're training the younger generation to step up and to do what their parents and grandparents and great-grandparents did before them," Scott said. ◆

Rowan Education Collaborative

If we were playing the popular gameshow Jeopardy, the Rowan Education Collaborative could easily be an answer in a category about effective partnerships and collaborations. The clue would be: This group is responsible for creating an agile talent framework that promotes prosperity for Rowan County business and residents. And in true Jeopardy style, the answer would be: What is the Rowan Education Collaborative (REC)?

The Rowan Education Collaborative is indeed an effective partnership among six education, government and economic development entities in Rowan County:

- Catawba College
- Livingstone College
- Rowan-Cabarrus Community College
- Rowan County Commissioners
- Rowan Economic Development
- Rowan-Salisbury Schools (RSS)

Together, this first-of-its-kind, innovative leadership group is working to link and leverage the education assets in Rowan County. Since its founding in 2019, the group has been busy creating an agile framework for the collaborative that includes a strategic vision, key initiatives, and metrics, as well as the creation of work teams focused on work-based learning, data and research, and marketing and branding to build a culture of education in the county.

We are smarter, stronger and better together," said Greg Edds, Rowan County Commission chair. "By aligning ourselves behind the common goal of creating a robust culture of learning, we can do more and achieve more for our students and our community. We have outstanding resources in Rowan County, and we want to tap into the strengths of each. Instead of silos of excellence, we want to create an alliance of excellence."

The Rowan Education Collaborative is founded on two underlying beliefs: that our institutions are more alike than they are different and that we can accomplish more together than on our own. Solving complex community issues is a team sport that requires alignment as we focus our thinking, combine our resources and remain focused on outcomes. This approach can be applied in any community setting with willing participants who share a clear vision of the future

The Rowan Education Collaborative is what we call a "No Overhead Organization". We have no paid staff, we have no offices and none of the traditional structure of a non-governmental organization, but we are able to accomplish much through our partnerships on projects. Each project is supported with existing assets from the member institutions, whether financial assets, human resources or our knowledge and networks. Our hope is that our example of how individuals and organizations can come together to align and invest in their collective future can help others break the paralysis that often keeps communities from moving forward to solve key issues.

The Rowan Education Collaborative has put together an impressive list of accomplishments by linking and leveraging their assets to turn their goals into actions and results including the passage of a $45 million bond initiative for the buildout of the Technology Education Complex (TEC) at Rowan-Cabarrus Community College and implementing a successful Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) Now campaign to remove the mystique and fear associated with completing the funding form.

The REC also has dedicated its time and attention to creating partnerships focused on higher education right here in Rowan County, including establishing a transfer agreement between Catawba College and Rowan-Cabarrus Community College that allows students at Rowan-Cabarrus to seamlessly enroll as juniors, as well as a teacher training initiative between Catawba College and Rowan-Salisbury Schools. Additionally, Rowan-Salisbury Schools Career and Technical Education programs are partnering with Rowan-Cabarrus Community College to provide more students the opportunity to explore careers through the Career & Technical Education (CTE) program.

The REC also stayed busy during the height of the COVID-19 Pandemic, coordinating safety measures among institutions – most notably, working with Livingstone's partnership with Ottendorf Laboratories to test employees and students at Livingstone College and Rowan-Cabarrus.

The work of the REC extends into the community, too. The Collaborative is responsible for creating a culture of education in Downtown Salisbury with pole banners in prominent locations that highlight each of the educational entities that make up the Collaborative. The banners are slated to display each year from May to September to celebrate the graduates of local schools and welcome students back to school in each fall.

"Now, more than ever, we must stay focused on the future, and education is one of the most powerful ways we can ensure that we continue to move forward, as individuals and collectively," said Greg Edds, Chair, Rowan County Board of Commissioners.

Despite all of its accomplishments, the REC plans to continue its work to implement more initiatives that further build and grow a culture of education in Rowan County. ◆

Rowan County as Diverse as its

ARTists

In Rowan County, we strive to be an original, and art is part of Rowan County's culture and creative spirit of individualism. From sculpture shows to local theater performances or live music over drinks, Rowan County has it all. Our three historic theatres, a nationally accredited visual arts center, galleries, a symphony orchestra, live music venues, public art displays and murals clearly depict what our original art scene is all about. We also have ten National Register and five Local Historic districts, a great history museum, two house museums and a meticulously restored depot which has been featured at the Smithsonian and in well-known movies.

Rowan County has had its own Arts Council for decades, and has seen private investments like parks with stages for concerts in recent years. You'll find artists proudly displaying their talents in shared studio and gallery spaces, in pottery stores, or in community wide annual events, such as Downtown Salisbury's Busker's Bash, the Rowan Arts & Ag Tour, Pops at the Post, and many

Rowan County

Rowan County has it all - spacious farms, historic homes with plenty of charm, new neighborhoods with all the amenities.

Your Chamber Business Directory lists local real estate agencies who will be happy to assist you in finding your dream home.

For now, here are a few simple trips you can make by car or on foot to start learning about Rowan's communities.

Farms and fields abound in and around Rockwell and Cleveland as well as to the north near the Woodleaf community.

Try this excursion: from Salisbury, take Statesville Boulevard (U.S. 70) west toward Cleveland. Turn left onto NC 801 South and go south to Sherrill's Ford Road. Turn left there to head back toward Salisbury. This loop takes you through some of Rowan's prime farm country.

High Rock Lake is a reservoir lake located in Davidson and Rowan counties of North Carolina, serving as a boundary between them. It is a reservoir for hydroelectric power generation. It is the northernmost of the Uwharrie Lakes and the second largest lake in North Carolina behind Lake Norman. Its water surface covers 15,180 acres (61 km2) and there are 365 miles (587 km) of shoreline. It begins at the confluence of the Yadkin River and the South Yadkin River. The lake's name is derived from neighboring "High Rock Mountain", the tallest mountain in the Uwharrie Mountains. High Rock Lake is currently managed and operated by the Cube-Hydro.

History is alive in Salisbury's downtown historic district. Homes from the 19th and early 20th centuries, many with a story to tell, line the streets within a block or two of the city center.

From the intersection of Main and Innes, take West Innes Street past the Rowan County offices. Go three blocks, then turn left onto South Ellis Street. Make your way down this street, then turn left on West Monroe Street. At the next block, turn left onto South Fulton Street to make your way back to Innes Street.

These streets close to Main Street feature historic homes as well as more recent houses with character.

Find your hometown

Most of Rowan's smaller municipalities retain a small-town character — local businesses, close-knit neighborhoods and plenty of smiling faces. Most of what you've heard about "Southern hospitality" is true and you can expect to get smiles and waves as you introduce yourself to the locals.

Every town has something different to offer, as well as a blend of old and new homes and neighborhoods. Pick a corner of the Rowan County map and go exploring. You just might find your new friends and neighbors waiting for you there.

Enjoy city lights

Several buildings on Main Street and within one or two blocks of it have been refurbished with apartments or lofts on their upper floors, perfect for those who want to be a short walk from everything. Some newer buildings also feature condos for sale.

There's no need to drive to see the possibilities — just find a convenient parking spot and take a walk down South Main Street from the center of town.

Moving Checklist:

- Be sure your mail follows you. Remember to put in a forwarding request at your local Post Office before you move. USPS.com
- Contact your local cable utility providers to set up electricity, gas, water/ sewer and telecommunications service as needed.
- Once you're settled, change your driver's license and register your vehicles.
 New residents must obtain a North Carolina license and register their vehicles within 30 days.

126 East Kerr Street Salisbury, NC 704-633-5312.

 A safety and emissions inspection is also required to obtain vehicle registration.

Department of Motor Vehicles Monday - Friday 8 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. 5780 South Main Street (US 29) Salisbury, NC 704-633-5873
