Asia Wells

Plans after graduation

I'm particularly drawn to enrolling in real estate courses at Rowan-Cabarrus Community College while also delving into the field of criminal justice.

Looking ahead, I envision a career that balances challenge and purpose, with interests ranging from hostage negotiation and crime analysis to crime scene investigation. The prospect of renovating properties intrigues me as well — it's an opportunity to blend creativity with practical skills while I explore my professional aspirations.

Additionally, I'm really excited to explore the world of art and design, particularly lapidary art.

Significant high school achievements

I was honored to be named an All-County Scholar, a recognition that truly reflects my dedication and hard work throughout my academic journey.

I also found that virtual learning played a significant role in my success, enhancing my computer skills — a valuable asset for the future — and providing a solid foundation for students overall.

I'm proud to have graduated with consistently high grades, maintaining a strong GPA throughout my academic career.

Crosby Scholars celebrates 10th graduating class

Staff report

SALISBURY — Crosby Scholars Rowan celebrated a decade of student success during its 10th Annual Senior Celebration, held at the F&M Trolley Barn on May 4.

The standing-room-only event honored the accomplishments of the Class of 2025, a remarkable group of students who have demonstrated leadership, accountability and academic commitment throughout their time in the program.

This milestone class included 186 graduating seniors from seven local high schools, each recognized with red, black and white honor cords symbolizing their dedication to the program. This year, $66,000 in scholarships was awarded to 40 Crosby Scholars seniors, continuing the program's tradition of investing in student success.

Collectively, the Class of 2025 contributed more than 5,763 hours of community service, attended 744 senior advising meetings and participated in more than 1,302 academies, equipping themselves with college knowledge, life skills and leadership tools to prepare for higher education and beyond.

A highlight of the celebration was the recognition of Gwin Barr All-Stars — an honor awarded to 56 students who successfully completed all program requirements from 6th through 12th grade. Those students exemplify what it means to stay the course and invest in their future.

Senior Iris Marroquin delivered a speech that captured the heart of the celebration. As a Salvadoran first-generation college student, Iris shared her journey of growth, resilience, and the vital role Crosby Scholars played in helping her discover her path. She spoke of the strength she draws from her parents' sacrifices and the importance of giving back to her community.

"Crosby Scholars has given me the tools to not just succeed academically but to thrive as an individual," she said.

Her words inspired fellow graduates to reflect on their own journeys and to embrace the road ahead with confidence, pride, and purpose.

Crosby Scholars Rowan Executive Director Jessica Vess closed the ceremony by encouraging students to stay connected and continue applying for Last Dollar Grant funding of up to $1,200 per year, toward unmet financial need for up to four years of study.

A press release from the organization said, "Crosby Scholars extends sincere thanks to Goodwill Industries of Northwest North Carolina, F&M Bank, Cheerwine, and all community partners, volunteers, donors, and families who made the event possible and continue to support the mission of college access for all."
